Coronation Thoughts.

The coronation of King George and Queen Mary has been a great and magnificent success from every point of view—admirably conceived in its general scheme and in its multifarious details, and splendidly organized and carried out in every respect. Our visitors, we are glad to learn, have been very greatly impressed by all visitors, we are glad to learn, have been very greatly impressed by all that they have seen of that grand historic pageant—perhaps the finest that any of them will ever witness—and we are glad to think that the impression which has thus been conveyed has been disseminated through the press of the civilized world, and may thus serve to correct an impression which our somewhat too demonstrates. sion which our somewhat too demon-strative pessimists and "devil's advo-cates" have caused to become more general than is altogether desirable, as to the inroads of senile decrepitude upon the bone and fibre of our great nation. We do not know with what nation. We do not know with what anticipations our visitors came to the coronation of King George, but we venture to assert that they will carry away with them an impression of greater vigor than many of them previously entertained. There is through-out the nation a stronger spirit of hopefulness and of youth than there was ten or twelve years ago. Old Eng-land, in a word, is younger than ever. Though proud of her traditions, as the Though proud of her traditions, as the ceremonial pageantry of the coronation proves, she is not in the least inclined to live idly upon them. The new generation has new laurels to win, and has taken to heart the historic admonition which King George administered on his return from his last great tour of the British dominions—"Wake up, England!" Our producers have awakened, and are overions—"Wake up, England!" Our producers have awakened, and are over-taking those rivals whom their own over-complacent confidence enabled to go past them in the race. The naval review gave an indication of the vast strength of our first line of defence, and the demeanor of the vast masses of inhabitants who were seen loyal and enthusiastic on every hand dem-onstrated the united spirit of the nation and its unimpaired patriotism. May the next coronation be long in coming: but when it does come may it find us still stronger and still more imbued with virile energy and enthus-issm.—Birmingham Post.

Long-Legged Heirlooms

"An heirloom, my son," explained the farmer's wife to her 12-year-old hov. "Is something handed down from father to son, and in most cases is highly prized."

"I'd prize these heirlooms I got on a good deal more," replied the youngster, "if they wasn't so long in the legs."—Mack's National Monthly.

Opposing the Parcels Post.

(Special to The Bulletin.) Washington, July 14 .- W. T. Richardson of this city was the first speaker on parcels post before the postoffice committee of the house yesterday. He said that he represented the Retail Druggists' association of the United States, which organization was opposed to the measure. The real advocates of the measure, he said, were the large mail order houses. He did not believe the farmers were in favor of a parcels post, but they were sign-ing petitions sent out by city dealers. He said it was a mistake to claim that mail order houses sold goods cheaper than local dealers, and cited a case in Danbury, Conn., where a man pur-chased a ten-dollar combination order of so-called druggists sundries from a mail order house, and afterwards found he could duplicate it in his home city for $6.44. The retail merchant, he said, was doing business at a much lower per cent of profit than at any time during the last fifteen years.

C. W. Burrows of Cleveland, Ohio, said that he represented the American

Hardware association, which associa-tion was opposed to postal carriage by the postal authorities of this country. He said that nowners in the world was there a parcels post being operated at a profit. He said William Jennings Bryan was right "once" when he said that "unjust taxtion was larceny in a legal form," and the merchants protested against being taxed to put parcels post into operation. The measure is being urged by a certain class of magnaines, ninety-five per cent, of the contents of which were advertisements of mail order houses. He read an advertisement from a Chicago paper offering good new to persons for circulatfering good pay to persons for circulating petitiens and securing signatures to be used by the Postal Progress league in their efforts to establish parcels post. He said that one large mail order house in Chicago, has contributed $17,000 to the Postal Progress league.

POETRY.

THEY KNOW NOT HARBORS.

The ships now in the harbor lie asless And have forgot how sea wind puffs the sails

There cast upon the decks. Yonder the deep Lies brooding and the lost gull weak-ly flails.

The calm with listless wing, that fain would be Wet with the spindrift of a scudding He sickens, pale Odysseus of the sea. Shaped for the storm, o'er windless waters now.

So have I fallen in thine arms asleep And my soul sickens and I restless lie, Adventure struck and hungry for the of rhythmic oars and islands drift-ing by.

I waken, let me go! It is not pride; Bright Lucifor into the darkness hurled Was happler than angels quiet eyed, God in me urges; yonder glooms the world.

The sailor seeks the haven but a day.
His life spills on the sea; then sweeter sleep
And dearer thou for yearnings for away:

They know not harbors who know
not the deep.
—Christian Glauss, in Scribner's.

JUST KEEP ON KEEPIN' OW.

If the day looks kinder gloomy.
And your chances kinder slim,
If the situation's puzzlin'
An' the prospects awful grim,
And perplexities keep pressin'
Till all hope is nearly gone.
Just bristle up and grit your teeth.
And keep on keepin' on.

Shunnin' never wins a fight,
And frettin' never pays:
There ain't no good in broodin' in
These pessimistic ways.
Smile just kinder cheerfully,
When hope is nearly gone.
And bristic up and grit your teeth,
And keep on keepin' on.

There ain't no use in growlin'
And grumblin' all the time.
When music's ringing everywhere,
And everything's in rhyme.
Just keep on smilin' cheerfully.
If hope is nearly gone,
And bristle up and grit your teeth,
And keep on keepin' on.
